And at the very moment when I was calling my lucky star hard names! How can I ever reward your thoughtfulness, Mr. Trine? It beats me how you do keep track of me this way—happening along like this every time I need a car the worst way in the world!"

But Judith had stepped up on the running board and was eying the driver coldly, with one hand significantly resting on the butt of the weapon at her side. The car remained at a standstill.

Suiphurous profanity followed, a supposed to "knit" or begin knitting on the ninth day, I believe. Mothers fix on the ninth or tenth day as the proper time to arise from childbed. Typhoid fever is due to "turn" some where in the neighborhood of the twenty-first day. And the protective effect of vaccination is generally said to last precisely seven years.

All of these fancies savor of astrology or black magic. Disease doesn't follow any fixed rule of behavior. Pneumonia reaches the of twelve hours more or less—he sevent at a standstill.

ease is a law unto itself in the matter.

Fractures are "knitting" or uniting from the instant of the accident to the very end of disability. The process is no more active one day than another. Mothers are ready and able to leave their bed in ten days no more commonly than in eight days or sixteen days. And vaccination protection to far as anybody knows, may be lost in a few months or it may continue for a lifetime in a given case.

But the "turning" of typhoid is less easily disposed of because our reversed medical fathers, we fear, encouraged the fancy, so anxious were they to reassure worried relatives of the languishing patient.

If the Patient Wins, the Fever Turns. We doubt whether any physician ever attends a case of typhoid fever in private practice without being called upon sooner or been by some one to, answer this question:

tever will turn into is the seventeenth day. It turns on the twenty-first, doeen't it?"

Being tired possibly even busy, the doctor is sorely tempted to give an evasive reply or to tacitly support the hope in order to escape a labortous explanation.

The average duration of typhoid fever is about four weeks—that is, the duration of the high temperature in an average case the temperature does begin to show a slight daily decline toward the end of the third week or the beginning of the fourth, but not especially on the twenty-first day. Yet even after that slight decline there is always the possibility of a rise again and a continuation of the fever for many days after the "turning."

Some of these fine days, if indeed
